Bureau memo dated 4/27/67 concerned Martin Luther King and Stanley David Levison. King had been under active and tight control of the communists with Levison, a lawyer in New York and secret member of the CP, writing King's speeches and statements made to the public. They met at the inn at the Kennedy Airport* and generally went over matters and various decisions as to what King was to do and say at various places. Levison was a smooth, clever manipulator behind King in his activities.

[REDACTED] former, advised that on 5/11/67 Stanley Levison and Andrew Young, Executive Assistant to Martin Luther King, were in contact (locality not given). Young disclosed that Cora Weiss contacted him and advised that the North Vietnamese representatives in Stockholm, Sweden, would like to meet with a group from the US peace movement on 5/15/67 in Paris, France. The North Vietnamese wanted an appraisal of the situation in the US. Levison did not have faith in Weiss' judgment and felt she contrived the meeting. On 5/12/67 Levison, Young and King discussed the above meeting. Levison suggested that a group of responsible and reasonable people make an honest appraisal of the peace sentiment in this country and offer it to the North Vietnamese through an agency like the UN. Levison promised to contact Weiss in an effort to dissuade her from making the trip to Paris and to urge her to follow recommendations that more influential people communicate

On 1/10/68 [redacted] advised that Tudja Crowder, who was affiliated with the New York Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy, discussed with Stanley Levison a National Conference for New Politics (NCNP) Madison Square Garden Rally, NYC, 2/5/68, in defense of Dr. Benjamin Spock and those indicted with him for urging resistance to the military draft. Crowder wanted Martin Luther King to attend the rally so King and Spock could unite on a platform and provide new leadership for the peace movement. Levison opposed this idea and suggested publishing a clear militant statement of the issues involved, signed by a hundred major leaders throughout the country. On 1/10/68 Levison counseled King regarding this proposed meeting indicating that King had to back Spock but he was not happy about King appearing on the NCNP platform. The following references in the file captioned "Southern Christian Leadership Conference" pertain to the activities of Stanley David Levison in connection with this organization from approximately 8/19/65 to the middle of September, 1970 in Georgia, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and WDC. b/

[REDACTED] Levison was a former clandestine member of the CP USA who gravitated to the SCLC. He subsequently became the principal advisor of Martin Luther King, Jr. on SCLC activities and policies including agreeing with violence and preparing a statement on the emergence of anti-semitism. Levison was a member of the Executive Committee of SCLC Board of Directors and general supervisor of the NYC SCLC Office. He participated in the initial organization of the Southern Christian Leadership Foundation, the "tax arm" of SCLC. He attended SCLC meetings, wrote speeches and statements for and gave advice and counsel to SCLC leaders on policy and finances. Levison was dissatisfied with the administration of SCLC President Ralph D. Abernathy and Abernathy detested him. Levison appeared to be continuing a determined effort to achieve a stronger influence in SCLC operations. Levison also was on the Executive Board of the American Jewish Congress.

King 'Influencer' Named

By Laurence Stern

Washington Post Staff Writer

The mysterious political influence whose name the FBI secretly invoked to persuade Robert F. Kennedy to permit the wiretapping of Martin Luther King Jr. was a New York lawyer who had been a close friend and supporter of King.

He is Stanley Levison, a civil rights activist who helped King since the days of the Birmingham bus boycott with free legal and financial advice, according to a 1971 book account whose accuracy was confirmed yesterday by a former high-ranking Justice Department official.

The issue of King's bugging and wiretapping during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations was revived last week in the Senate intelligence committee, which maintained the high classification on Levison's identity accorded it by the FPI.

A spokesman for the committee said yesterday that the identity of the King associate who triggered the wiretap and bugging was being kept secret for "national security" reasons rather than privacy grounds.

Levison's role in the King surveillance was described in detail, however, in the 1971 book "Kennedy Justice" by New York writer Victor Navasky. The account received virtually no attention in the news media and neither the FBI nor Justice Department has previously com-mentioned on Navasky's account.

In the wiretap requests of Oct. 7 and 18, 1963, which bore the signed approval of Robert F. Kennedy, then Attorney General, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said the surveillance was necessary "in view of the possible Communist influence in the racial situation." Copies of the authorization released by the Senate committee last week deleted the identity of the person named in Hoover's request.

Hoover memoranda bearing the initialed approval of Kennedy's successor, Nicholas Katzenbach, also said the installation of a bug was necessary in a New York City hotel room because of the influence on King of "individuals with subversive backgrounds."

In the testimony last week on the wiretap and bugging case the suspected associate of King was described as a "secret Communist" although there was never any evidence cited publicly that King or his movement, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was ever under any form of Communist influence.

Katzenbach testified last week that as a deputy to Kennedy he recalled seeing in 1962 "one or more memoranda stating, in substance, that an important secret member of the Communist Party, known to be such to the FBI, was in close contact with Dr. King and might be influencing the actions of Dr. King's movement in ways amicable to the interests of the Soviet Union and contrary to those of the United States."

Katzenbach said that Robert Kennedy had a member of the Justice Department's civil rights division call upon King and suggest that "it was not in his interest nor in the interest of his movement to have further contact with this person." Katzenbach did not name the person.

King followed the suggestion for a while. Katzenbach testified, but then resumed his contacts. Afterward Hoover prepared "a detailed memorandum about Dr. King, referring to the fact of Communist infiltration in the movement and discussing questions of moral character," said Katzenbach.

When Hoover gave the memorandum wide circulation in the government, Katzenbach related, Kennedy became furious and ordered him to withdraw all copies.

Later, however, Kennedy authorized the wiretaps.

According to Navasky's account, the Justice Department failed to provide King with the evidence he requested to substantiate the allegations against Levison and justify the request that he cut off the association.

King, under prodding from the Attorney General and President, agreed to stop his association with Levison but then reconsidered and resumed the personal and working relationship. "If anybody wants to make something of it let them try," King is reported by Navasky to have told Levison.

"According to the Kennedys, when the FBI saw that King hadn't really broken with Levison, this confirmed Mr. Hoover's worst suspicions—that King was either under Communist control or a conscious fellow traveler," Navasky wrote.

In all the controversy over the responsibility for the King wiretaps and buggings there has never been any substantiation of the Hoover allegations against Levison that furnished the FBI rationale for the surveillance.

Levison, who was away from his New York home yesterday recuperating from surgery and therefore unavailable for comment, is still active in civil rights legal work in New York.

In her memoir, "My Life with Martin Luther King Jr.," Coretta King recounted that in the various crises of his life—from his indictment in Montgomery, Ala., on trumped-up tax falsification charges in 1956 to his assassination 12 years later—Levison was always on hand "to offer assistance . . . always working in the background, his contribution has been indispensable."

King Adviser Says FBI 'Used' Him

By Don Oberdorfer

Washington Post Staff Writer

Stanley Levison, the New York civil rights activist secretly cited by the FBI in allegations that the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was under Communist influence, says he was merely an FBI "scapegoat."

Levison spoke up in a telephone interview last week after being identified in press reports as the "mysterious political influence" whose name the FBI had used in warnings to the highest officials of the Kennedy administration more than a decade ago.

Now in poor health and retired from most business and civic activity, Levison said the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's "primary objective was to 'get' Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. My conclusion is that I was a scapegoat Hoover was using for this purpose."

New information about the FBI warnings—and the wiretapping and bugging of King—surfaced in the current Senate intelligence committee hearings.

The details of the FBI's allegations against Levison have never been made public. Various reports have quoted the FBI as claiming that a mysterious "secret Communist" close to King was a danger to national security.

"I was never a member of the Communist Party," said Levison. "I did know some people who were . . . Particularly in the 1930s and 1940s you scarcely could have been an intellectual in New York without knowing some."

Levison said the charges against him were a case of "guilt by association" compounded by allegations from a former business associate who falsely named other persons as "secret Communists" in order to clear himself.

Levison, who is 63, calls himself "a political kind of person." He was a prominent member of a New York businessmen's committee for the re-election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944 and at various times a vice president of the Metropolitan New York Council of the American Jewish Congress, treasurer of an Episcopal Church magazine called The Churchman, an adviser in the organizing efforts of the New York Hospital Workers Union and a guiding force behind the New York Citizen's Inquiry on Parole and Criminal Justice. He has also been an attorney, a real estate man, a Ford Motor Co. dealer and in the import-export business among others.

His most noteworthy activity, as a friend, financial backer and adviser of the late Dr. King, began during the days of the Montgomery bus boycott 20 years ago. Levison was introduced to King by Bayard Rustin, a black leader in New York. Levison did free legal work for King, and devised fund-raising appeals for King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Rep. Andrew Young (D-Ga.) recalls that King arranged for him to be interviewed by Levison before hiring him as an SCLC aide in the early 1960s. When President Kennedy warned King about the relationship with Levison in a White House Rose Garden conversation in 1963, King assigned Young to find out from Justice Department officials the details of the "threat" which Levison was thought to pose.

Despite the warnings—which arose from FBI reports—neither senior Justice Department officials nor anyone else could produce any hard information against Levison, Young recalled. King flatly disbelieved the allegations, according to Young.

"We knew what communism was. There had never

J. EDGAR HOOVER
...said out to "get" King

been anything in his (Levison's) influence on the movement that suggested anything more radical than we were suggesting ourselves . . . If anything, he was a conservative influence. He was very cautious about becoming involved with the war in Vietnam, for example," Young said.

Levison said he refused on Fifth Amendment grounds to answer questions in a closed session of the Senate Internal Security Committee in 1962. Levison said he did so because he feared the session—evidently based on his former business associate's charges—would amount to an attack on King.

In fact, he said, King's name never came up at the hearing, which centered on the names of New York lawyers—many unknown to him. A spokesman for the Senate committee could find no record of the Levison hearing in a search of committee files last week.

Despite lack of evidence, King terminated his relations with Levison for a time after Kennedy's warnings. After a few months, however, King began calling on Levison for advice again. According to Levison, King said the breaking off of relations had been "a mistake."

King's resumed relationship with Levison is believed to have been cited by the FBI when it obtained approval from Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy in October, 1963, for wiretaps on King. The Senate intelligence committee published documents leading to this conclusion, though Levison's name was deleted.

Levison said he did not believe his own telephone had been routinely tapped, nor did the FBI ever interview him. "I was in the telephone book—both my business and residence. But nobody was sent to see me."

The New York attorney said Hoover was only interested in him as a means for attacking King. "You remember when Hoover called King 'a notorious liar.' . . . Well, I'm delighted that now the Senate hearings have disclosed it was Hoover that was a notorious liar rather than Martin Luther King," Levison declared.

This informative memorandum to record for the file discussion held 12/15/75 by Supervisor [REDACTED] Intelligence Division, with Robert Murphy, Criminal Section Chief, Civil Rights Division of the Department, concerning a project underway involving Departmental review of King and related files.

Inasmuch as we have canvassed all field offices, at the Department's request, for inventories of pertinent files, inquiry was made of Murphy as to whether or not the Department visualized some time reviewing field files. He stated that this might occur but, if so, it would likely be on a limited basis. For example, Departmental personnel might visit some key offices such as Atlanta and New York.

Attempt was made by [REDACTED] to obtain some assessment as to how long this project would continue. Murphy advised that early next week, definitely before Christmas, the Civil Rights Division will furnish the Attorney General a status report which will emphasize the enormity of the task given them if all relevant files were actually to be reviewed. It is intended that the Attorney General be told that it is impossible for the limited number of personnel now assigned to this project (three individuals, including Assistant Attorney General Pottinger), to complete the task of reviewing all serials in all files unless they were given years to do so. Murphy visualized the possibility that the Attorney General might assign a staff of attorneys who would work on the file review for several months.

Because the Department requested as the first file to be reviewed that of King's former close advisor, Stanley David Levison, [REDACTED] inquired as to the reason for the Department's extreme interest in this particular file and how it is visualized that the Levison investigation would have any bearing on the completeness of our investigation of the assassination of King. Murphy responded that its interest in the Levison case stems only from their interest in insuring we originally had a firm basis for the King investigation. Their interest is also tied in with an earlier suspicion that Levison might have been a Bureau informant. (This matter was covered in a prior memorandum reporting Pottinger's inquiry on this point and [redacted] dispelling any such thought to Pottinger.) b7c

Murphy indicated that if and when tapes are to be listened to, it is their intention that it be done only by Pottinger.

Murphy was advised that because the Department's original request in this matter dated 12/4/75 asked for inventories "in your field offices," we had canvassed only field offices, to the exclusion of Legats. He was told of our procedure on file destruction by Legats, but that there might be some material in some Legats' offices, particularly in Mexico City. He indicated that for the time our canvass of field offices only is sufficient and that we should take no action as to inventorying Legats' offices.

Finally, Murphy was briefed concerning certain material in our files in late 1963 and early 1964 which refer to some differences between Mr. Hoover and the then Domestic Intelligence Division on the King and related investigations. Murphy was told that some of Mr. Hoover's remarks written into the files were of a sarcastic nature and for a full understanding he should be aware of the atmosphere then existing between Hoover and then Assistant Director William C. Sullivan in that they apparently disagreed on the interpretation of communist RECOMMENDATION: influences in racial matters.

In connection with an ongoing project being handled in the IS-1 Section, INTD, wherein Department personnel are reviewing our files concerning Martin Luther King, Jr., and related matters, it is necessary that we have on hand and readily available all sections, including JUNE folders, of the files relating to King and the four other matters noted below for copy designation of this memorandum. These files are quite voluminous ranging from 14 to 162 sections in size.

To facilitate the maintenance of these files in the most practical manner for file review, it is suggested authority be granted for their maintenance on a temporary basis in Room 4077, J. Edgar Hoover Building, and charged to Unit Chief P. E. Nugent.*

King Adviser Says FBI 'Used' H

By Don Oberdorfer
 Washington Post Staff Writer

Stanley Levison, the New York civil rights activist secretly cited by the FBI in allegations that the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was under Communist influence, says he was merely an FBI "scapegoat."

Levison spoke up in a telephone interview last week after being identified in press reports as the "mysterious political influence" whose name the FBI had used in warnings to the highest officials of the Kennedy administration more than a decade ago.

Now in poor health and retired from most business and civic activity, Levison said the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's "primary objective was to 'get' Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. My conclusion is that I was a scapegoat Hoover was using for this purpose."

New information about the FBI warnings—and the wiretapping and bugging of King—surfaced in the current Senate intelligence committee hearings.

The details of the FBI's allegations against Levison have never been made public. Various reports have quoted the FBI as claiming that a mysterious "secret Communist" close to King was a danger to national security.

"I was never a member of the Communist Party," said Levison. "I did know some people who were . . . Particularly in the 1930s and 1940s you scarcely could have been an intellectual in New York without knowing some."

Levison said the charges against him were a case of "guilt by association" compounded by allegations from a former business associate who falsely named other persons as "secret Communists" in order to clear himself.

Levison, who is 63, calls himself "a political kind of person." He was a prominent member of a New York businessmen's committee for the re-election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944 and at various times a vice president of the Metropolitan New York Council of the American Jewish Congress, treasurer of an Episcopal Church magazine called The Churchman, an adviser in the organizing efforts of the New York Hospital Workers Union and a guiding force behind the New York Citizen's Inquiry on Parole and Criminal Justice. He has also been an attorney, a real estate man, a Ford Motor Co. dealer and in the import-export business among others.

His most noteworthy activity, as a friend, financial backer and adviser of the late Dr. King, began during the days of the Montgomery bus boycott 20 years ago. Levison was introduced to King by Bayard Rustin, a black leader in New York. Levison did free legal work for King, and devised fund-raising appeals for King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

J. EDGAR HOOVER

Rep. Andrew Young (D-Ga.) recalls that King arranged for him to be interviewed by Levison before hiring him as an SCLC aide in the early 1960s. When President Kennedy warned King about the relationship with Levison in a White House Rose Garden conversation in 1963, King assigned Young to find out from Justice Department officials the details of the "threat" which Levison was thought to pose.

Despite the warnings—which arose from FBI reports—neither senior Justice Department officials nor anyone else could produce any hard information against Levison, Young recalled. King flatly disbelieved the allegations, according to Young.

"We knew what communism was. There had never been anything in his (Levison's) influence on the movement that suggested anything more radical than we were suggesting ourselves . . . If anything, he was a conservative influence. He was very cautious about becoming involved with the war in Vietnam, for example," Young said.

Levison said he refused on Fifth Amendment grounds to answer questions in a closed session of the Senate Internal Security Committee in 1962. Levison said he did so because he feared the session—evidently based on his former business associate's charges—would amount to an attack on King.

In fact, he said, King's name never came up at the hearing, which centered on the names

STANLEY LEVISON, C7; ADVISER TO DR. KING

New York Lawyer Had a Key Role in S.C.L.C. Efforts to Further
Civil Rights Movement

Stanley David Levison, a New York lawyer and businessman, who was a key adviser to the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and an important behind-the-scenes figure in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, died Wednesday at his home after a long illness. Mr. Levison, who lived at 85 East End Avenue, was 67 years old.

As a lawyer, Mr. Levison played a prominent role in civil rights, peace and labor causes. He was known for his strong support of the S.C.L.C., the non-violent group that Dr. King headed and forged into a powerful arm of the civil rights movement in the 1960's.

Andrew Young, former chief United States delegate to the United Nations, who is now in Douala, Cameroon, said of Mr. Levison:

"Stan Levison was one of the closest friends Martin King and I ever had. Of all the unknown supporters of the civil rights movement, he was perhaps the most important. He never pushed his own views on us, but was always willing to be critical and to think through ideas with us. Stan and his wife and his son have been part of my family."

Tribute From Coretta King

From Atlanta, Dr. King's widow, Coretta Scott King, paid tribute to Mr. Levison, saying:

"I was deeply saddened to learn of the death of Stanley Levison. Stanley Levison was more than one of my husband's most loyal and supportive friends. He was a trusted and dedicated adviser, a role he continued to play in support of my work at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change. Because he was such a modest man, few people know of the magnitude of his contributions to the labor, civil rights and peace movements. He was truly one of the greatest unsung heroes in the nonviolent struggle for justice and social decency in 20th-century America."

Mr. Levison, a real estate investor and Ford dealer who was active in the American Jewish Congress, influenced the financial policies, strategy and tactics used by Dr. King and the S.C.L.C.

In the past, the Federal Bureau of Investigation asserted that Mr. Levison was a Communist influence on the movement and used the assertion to justify its electronic monitoring of Dr. King's activities.

The bureau never offered any proof of its allegation, and friends noted that Mr. Levison was never indicted for any alleged failure to register as a member of the Communist Party. And in 1978, after television programs had revived the issue, Mr. Levison asserted in an interview, "I was not nor am I now a member of the Communist Party."

Response to Communist Charge

"No one with a modicum of sense could have concluded that a man with the force of intellect and fierce independence that Martin King had could have been dominated by anybody."

Mr. Levison worked for the S.C.L.C. as an unpaid volunteer. His son, Andrew, said that Mr. Levison had been instrumental in giving Dr. King the idea for the Poor People's Campaign, the march on Washington that Dr. King had been planning shortly before he was assassinated in 1968.

Some conference staff members, in private conversations among themselves in the 1960's, questioned whether it was appropriate for Mr. Levison, an outsider, to exercise such extensive influence in matters that mainly concerned blacks.

And President Kennedy warned Dr. King in 1963 that he should dissociate himself from Mr. Levison to help protect the movement from allegations of Communist ties. Victor Navasky, said in his prize-winning book "Kennedy Justice."

Nevertheless, Mr. Levison remained influential with Dr. King until the black leader was killed, and worked afterward with Mrs. King.

Mr. Levison lived in New York, where he was born on May 2, 1912, the son of Harry Dudley Levison, a businessman, and Esther Kirstein Levison.

In the early 1930's, Mr. Levison studied at the University of Michigan, Columbia University, and the New School for Social Research before taking a bachelor of laws degree in 1936 at St. John's University, which also awarded him a master of laws the next year.

Mr. Levison began practicing law in New York in 1938, served with the Coast Guard in World War II, and was active in a variety of businesses, including the Ford dealership, a tool and die company, and a nickel company.

Mr. Levison is survived by his wife, the former Beatrice Merkin, a reading specialist at the Northside Center for Child Development; a son, Andrew of Atlanta, and a brother, Roy Bennett.

A memorial service will be held next Monday, Sept. 24, at 6 P.M. at the Martin Luther King Jr. Labor Center at District 1150, 260 West 44th Street.
